Salters' Institute Chemistry Festival 2017

Earlier this week, a team of Year 8 Platanos College pupils represented us at the Salters' Institute Chemistry Festival as part of a national competition at the London Southbank University.

This was a great opportunity for our enthusiastic young scientists to spend a day in a university department and take part in practical chemistry activities aimed at challenging our pupils and giving them an insight into real-life laboratory experiments.

There were a total of 16 schools competing against each other in a series of tough challenges. Following a long day of competition, our pupils were awarded second place.

Congratulations to our pupils, Tassnim Abdessalem (8A), Sumayah Abdulrahim (8A), Emma Bui (8A) and Karina Lima (8A) for their effort and achievement. We will aim to be crowned champions next year.
